The doctors found nothing wrong with her and said they couldn't find anything medically wrong with her, according to a statement released by the first lady's office on Thursday. "She had a stomach bug and was treated with over-the-counter medication," the statement said. "Laura Bush, herself, is healthy and well," the statement said. "Thank you for your concerns." The statement said she was released from the hospital on January 20 after taking over-the-counter medication. On January 19, Mrs. Bush was taken to George Washington University Hospital for a follow-up exam after suffering from food poisoning. The statement said doctors found no medical problems. The first lady's doctor has since performed further tests, the statement said. The statement did not say what kind of food poisoning she suffered from or what kind of medicine she was given. "Any news is good news," the first lady's spokesman, Jim McGrath, said Thursday. McGrath said Mrs. Bush did not have any fever, cramping, nausea or vomiting. is, defendant's motion for summary judgment is granted.
